When The Nation Feasts
(Thanksgiving Day 2001)
By April Packard

We bow our heads
As the late sun
Drags shadows across the table.
We sit Scraping as it sets,
Our chairs against the floor
Our teeth as they chatter That same prayer,
Spoken from so many lips.
The knives and forks are silent,
As we fold our hands
And wait for grace.

Eye Contact
By Anna Fierro

911, a broken rule
eye contact, permission given cell phone clatter in English class was David on flight 93? student voice, teaching stopped he's capital grounded, living

911, a broken rule
eye contact, permission given carpet knife pounce, rage waving first strike Bin Laden blow firemen crying, nation staring thousands Pompeii buried

911, a broken rule
the President needs a new war America standing together, close eye contact permission given

Black man
By William Haugabrook

From the darkest, deepest soul of God's green earth Appears a man, Black man His shades range from the blackest blacks Red, yellow, and almost white, Black man A spiritual being through all he has seen When master said all aboard, Shackled down Still praising the lord was man, Black man From the cotton fields, to the playing fields Hard work has been his will, Black man Doctors, inventors, great men of such There is no area he has left untouched With drive, determination, and trust in GOD
He has kept his faith when times got hard, Black man
So I ask this question...
Why, overtime, has the black men been the center of senseless crimes?
Today's threats are not Skinheads, KKK, or the Arian Brothers Statistics say that over time Blacks will eliminate each other.
Doctor king once said that he had a dream Now all is lost, as it may seem Naptime is over and Satan has made plans To gain control of all men Including you.... The Black man.

Ride, Doggy, Ride

By Kathryn Lee Laut

Engine's purring like a kitten.
Dog's head hanging out the window searching for the source of this endless purring, but no kitty out here, the wind blowing ears 'til they flap like bird wings fast and wild like a beating heart happy with its speed— exhilarating distance between there and here invisible space between before and a constant now.

An inner feeling of eminent lift-off-any moment now feet will leave the ground below like a bad taste.
Frightened realization there's nothing to hold on to.
Live from empty moment to the next anonymous, empty moment.
Ride, Doggy, ride
There's nothing to hold on to.

Fly like the wind-fast and frightened and ultimately empty.
Endless vacation of life

Coffee Grinds
By Melanie Blais

It's sad the way we live us sleep deprived college kids Test after test we bare while most teachers don't give a care All this information to understand Guess college life aint all that grand What we go through would blow ya minds Up all night, crunchin' coffee grinds We're tuff students and we'll survive
I just hope we make it mentally alive That dreadful word "Insomnia" shines while we crunch our coffee grinds

Whisper
By Daniel Sherwood

Words like a feather, whispered on the wind Elusive, intrusive
Poke you in the eye if you're not careful You don't always know what to say Sometimes you say it anyway

Then it hits you Regret Didn't come out quite like you meant it to Tossed confetti in the air Where it landed you didn't care
'til now
Can't take it back Cause now it's everywhere

Screen Play
By Kathryn Lee Laut

I keep falling for smooth movie lines slipping from the tongues of glorified liars.

Actors play at sadness like a game you can quit when the scenery changes.

Real life has no script.
I'm never sure of what to say.
There's no plot here,
no message,
no soundtrack recording.

Random awkward scene:
Girl looks into a mirror waiting to be rescued wanting to be beautiful hoping the film ends soon.
